Message from the President

Aubrey Nash

Message from the President, September 2019

I hope all of you and our four-legged friends have survived the extremely hot summer. We have, but not so sure about my outdoor plants. Are you ready for the NMDC National Round-Up? This year we will gather in Springfield, Missouri at the Missouri Entertainment & Events Center. NMDC Round-Up is being held during the Ozark Mountain Fall Classic shows in November. This is a four day all breed show, Thursday thru Sunday. NMDC will be on Friday, details are still being worked out with Foy Trent, Superintendent. Reserve grooming can be requested through the Ozark Mountain Fall Classic premium list. The host hotel is the Best Western Plus Coach House Inn, more details on that in this issue of the Digest. This is a good location and all rooms open directly to the outdoors with lots of green area for x-pens. Our appreciation dinner will also be held on Saturday night at the Events Center. We are having a raffle at the dinner and are looking for donations. Also, we're looking for people to help put the raffle together. Contact me or Laura Abbott-Licht if you are willing to be a part of our team. We are always looking for volunteers.

Two of our members and regular volunteers have lost their husbands recently. Our condolences go out to Marie Doris and Robbie Loyd and their families.

Have you noticed some changes to our Board of Directors? Janice has resigned from the board and Shelly Baldwin, who maintains our website, has taken her place. Also, Terry Carr-Hall has taken over the new membership processing. His name, address, and e-mail are in this issue of the Digest. Thanks to both Shelly and Terry for taking on these responsibilities.

The Digest is looking good. Hollie is doing a fabulous job. Your wins deserve to be noticed so keeps those ads coming. Also, if you find an interesting article that applies to the dog world and, dachshunds specifically, please submit them and we will try to get them published for all to see.

Until next time, hope to see you all at the National in November. Be good to one another, share those positive thoughts and make this a better miniature dachshund world.

A Fond Farewell

I've been the treasurer for NMDC since 1999 and have really enjoyed the job. However, as many of you know, I've been diagnosed with ALS with a bulbar onset. The disease has started in my mouth, affecting tongue, swallowing mechanism, and lips. I can no longer speak or eat. So it is time to step down. I've been very fortunate to have worked with two very efficient and competent Digest editors and many hard-working show chairs. I've attended every show and board meeting since 2000. I remember the heat of showing outdoors at Purina, of getting ready for the general meeting at Valpo only to run for cover when the tornado sirens went off, and our show in San Diego, probably the most beautiful show site ever. I regret that we did not achieve our goal of separation during my tenure. That will have to be left to present and future members. I would urge everyone to support this Club by advertising in the Digest. We have a lovely magazine with reasonably priced advertising.

Dave Temple has agreed to take on all of my responsibilities. I trust everyone will give him the same patience and cooperation you have shown me over the years. I still occasionally attend a conformation show or scent-work trial and plan to continue my membership. So if you see me ringside, I can wave and smile but you'll understand why I can't say "hello".

Sandy

THANK YOU

The NMDC board thanks Sandy for her many years of service and dedication to the Treasurer's position.

The Dachshund: “A Philosophy Unto Himself”

National Purebred Dog Day® nationalpurebreddogday.com

While political cartoonists commonly used images of the Dachshund to ridicule Germany during war, the breed was quite dear to Germans. They viewed with affection breed traits they saw as the embodiment of Teutonic qualities: Reliability, courage, obstinance, somewhat conservative, and a little nose. A few years back, Udo Kopernik, then the spokesman for the German Dog Federation, was quoted as saying with regards to the breed: “There’s his legendary stubbornness and resilience, which is something he needs if he is to confront a fox or a badger underground. And there’s also a certain degree of megalomania. That makes the Dachshund very charming.”

We particularly liked a quote from Vinzenz Ölgemöller, Dachshund breeder, and honorary chairman of the Ibbenbüren Dachshund Society in northwestern Germany. “When he doesn’t feel like doing something he’ll just sit there staring you out, he’s a philosophy unto himself.”

The Dachshund, as closely connected with Germany as its beer and sausages, is considered a symbol of Germany, and indeed, when the 1972 Olympic Games were held in Munich, a Dachshund named “Waldi” was the mascot. The breed was the most popular breed in Germany in the 1970s and 1980s, followed by German Shepherd Dogs, though that flipped in the 1990s when German Shepherds took the lead, probably because of the TV series “Inspector Rex.”

Still, the news that came in 2008 was surprising. The Dachshund was in trouble. The German Dog Federation said that the births of Dachshunds registered by German breeders had slumped 35 per cent over the past decade. Only 7,300 Dachshund pups were born in 2005 as compared to 12,000 whelped in 1996, and a whopping 28,000 pups in 1972 (perhaps an “Olympic bump”). Ölgemöller, however, remained optimistic. “He’s such an individualist that he’ll survive this downturn and will remain a German national symbol.”

Perhaps Ölgemöller got it half right. Last year, the Dackelmuseum in Germany opened its doors, probably the only museum devoted entirely to the Dachshund, and while the number of Dachshunds more than doubled in the past ten years, the surge was in Great Britain, not Germany. Kennel Club registrations surged 40 per cent since 2015 to nearly 9,000 new registrations in 2017, though that, too, was a cause of concern. A spokesman for The Kennel Club thought that “Stanley” had had a “major impact” on Dachshund ownership in the UK. Who was Stanley? Since January 2015, a miniature smooth haired Dachshund named “Stanley” has appeared on billboards, television and football stadiums across the country, the dog being part of the advertising for Vitality health insurance. Stanley even shows up on the face of an Apple Series 4 watch.

Not surprisingly, then, the Dachshund leading the UK breed boom is the Miniature Smooth Haired variety with a record 5,735 registrations last year (the long haired version followed with 1,027 new registrations). Celebrity ownership also helped: The singer, Adele, and actors Christian Slater and Ashley Olsen both have Dachshunds.

It was a remarkable turnaround for a breed that during WWI was the object of ridicule and stone throwing assaults in the streets. Balance dictates that in time, things will level out, but here’s hoping that until that happens, substandard breeders won’t flood the country with unsound dogs.

The Dachshund: The Canine Hell Gate Bridge

National Purebred Dog Day® nationalpurebreddogday.com

The Dachshund has to be one of our favorite breeds to use as an illustration of form following function, and with this post, we touch upon the breed's chest.

Dachshunds were bred to “go to ground,” and that means furiously digging towards prey that’s often a ill tempered badger holed up in a tunnel (or, as as D. Caroline Coile and Michele Earle-Bridges put it in their book on the breed, “35 pounds of fury in a hole”). Breathing room? Not much of it, usually.

The more furiously the dog digs, the more oxygen is used up, and it becomes necessary to inhale more of the depleted air to support all that digging. A Dachshie's chest, which should be oval and comparatively broad, has lungs that go back as far as its ribs, and this helps the dog's diaphragm act like bellows. The longer the rib cage, the more air can be processed. That long rib cage also helps support the dog's long back. In a wonderful piece written by Laurence Alden Horswell, he likened the dog's design to, "box girders under the southern approach to the New York, New Hampshire and H.R.R. Hell Gate Bridge."

Cover Story

Front Cover

CH Duchwood's Justified MSP "Marshall"

Marshall won three 5 pt. majors, all at specialties under breeder-judges. Of course the biggest thrill was winning WD, BOW at the DCA National specialty, finishing his Championship! A heartfelt thanks to judge Jan Swalbe for finding the best dog, regardless of color, pattern or size!
