CH KleinerHund Perfekt Pebbles MS CD RN CGC

November 8, 2001 to August 30, 2017

My sweet Pebbles. My first of everything, chocolate, dapple, miniature, show dog, CHAMPION! Pebbles never met a stranger & always eager to please. Free stacked like no other in the ring with her eyes always on me. From the conformation ring, to the obedience ring, and in the rally ring, we were a great team. She hated to get her picture taken, but loved to give many kisses. Her nickname(s) from my husband were "Queenie" or "StrutBitch", they were well earned. I will miss her being in my bed. I will miss her in my lap. I will miss her ringing the bells to go outside. I will miss her...FOREVER.

Message from the President

CONGRATULATIONS to everybody that made our 2017 NMDC National at Purina Farms a great success. Thanks to all the exhibitors that supported our club through their entries, and thanks to Debbie Melgren for her patience, understanding and excellent judging. I can't thank our board and members enough for jumping in and volunteering wherever needed. A special thanks to Art Sanderson for doing all the secretarial/superintendent work, from producing the premium list to printing the catalog, to keeping all of us on course and on time. Laura, Karen, and many others organized an outstanding raffle, and thanks to Dave Temple for being the "raffle auctioneer, extra-ordinaire". Thanks to Marie Doris and friends for organizing a "meet and greet" at the host hotel to start the weekend off. Laura made a comment to me as we were cleaning up after the dinner that she had never seen so many volunteers wanting to help. I agree with her and want to thank everybody for your help, and ask your continued support in any and every area it takes to put on this wonderful event. If you haven't been asked, it is an oversight. Please tap one of the board members on the shoulder and say "count me in", and we will. Pat Hodges will be our show chairperson for 2018 and the show will be in Knoxville, TN in conjunction with the Tennessee Valley KC all breed shows. More information will be coming out on this later.

In the last digest I asked those of you that are members of DCA (our Parent Club) to get your ballots in on the breed standard change. You did and I thank you. If you haven't heard by now the change was approved by the membership and as soon as AKC reviews it the change, defining piebalds, will be added to the dachshund standard.

Speaking of DCA, make plans now to attend the National in Columbus, OH in May. Let's get those miniatures out there and be seen and, remember, you do not have to be a member of DCA to show at the National. I will be there and hope to see all of you.

Be good to one another and share those thoughts.

BRUCELLA CANIS

— INFECTION EMERGING AS A REPRODUCTIVE DISEASE ACROSS THE U.S.

CHRISTY PETERSEN, DVM, PH.D.,
Iowa State University

JENNA BJORK

Brucella canis is a bacterium that causes subtle, yet harmful reproductive disorders in dogs. While many dogs may not exhibit clinical signs, characteristic indicators include abortions between 45 and 60 days of gestation in females, testicular inflammation in males, and infertility in both sexes. Because the disease often goes unnoticed and the bacteria are shed in bodily secretions, the disease can spread rapidly throughout a kennel. The bacterium was first identified in dogs in 1966, particularly associated with Beagles in research colonies, and has since been found worldwide in many dog breeds including Australian Shepherds, Boston Terriers, Chihuahuas, Dachshunds, Golden Retrievers, Lhasa Apsos, Miniature Pinschers, Pomeranians, Poodles, Shih Tzus, Yorkshire Terriers, and mix-breed dogs. Over the past forty years the number of B. canis cases has increased throughout the US. Prevalence in Oklahoma alone rose from 2% in 1994-95 to 13% in 2002-3, corresponding to increasing costs associated with reproduction losses due to canine brucellosis and euthanasia of infected dogs. Although some dog breeders have attributed this rise in disease to husbandry practices or operations like “puppy-mills,” this disease is being seen in many reputable kennels as well.

Similar to the other five Brucella species (abortus, melitensis, neotomae, ovis, suis), this disease is zoonotic with the ability to infect humans, increasing the need for accurate diagnosis and control.

While not as virulent as its sister species Brucella abortus, which causes undulant fever in humans, B. canis has the potential to chronically infect people and cause flulike symptoms such as fever, chills, fatigue, weakness, enlarged lymph nodes, and weight loss. Source of infection is typically through contact with aborting bitches but can occur through any exposure to infected animals, tissues such as placenta or aborted feti, or secretions including vaginal discharge, semen, blood, milk, and urine. The current diagnostic gold standard is bacterial culture from blood or reproductive tissues. Unfortunately, Brucella is difficult to culture making false negative results common. Serological tests such as the ME-RSAT, TAT, and AGID adequately detect disease 8-12 weeks post-infection, but these tests cannot detect early disease, from time of infection until there are detectable levels of anti-Brucella antibody present.

Law in several states lists canine brucellosis a reportable disease subject to quarantine. Testing of all breeding animals and euthanasia of infected animals is required once a kennel becomes quarantined. Perpetuation of canine brucellosis is due largely to the perceived negative implications

Where Have all the puppies gone?

by Peri Norman

Reprinted with Permission from THE CANINE CHRONICLE

A friend and I were discussing upcoming shows, entries and points. In the course of the conversation, she bemoaned the fact that entries are down in her breed at all the shows because no one had any puppies last year. While there are many factors that contribute to entries at the dog show, from perceived quality of judges and attractiveness of the venue, to the scheduling of specialty club meetings and maybe a particularly desirable trophy, the bottom line reality of our sport is that we need puppies.

Puppies are sold to buyers who may be long-time competitors in dog sports or they may go to people who haven't yet experienced the joy of a Winners ribbon or a qualifying agility run. We can talk about improving our events. We can encourage and support beginners. We can join a club and help put on an event. But in the end, we must have puppies. Nothing we do can motivate a person like the sweet smell of puppy breath and the promise of years of companionship. In the not too distant past, I mentored a gal with her first show dog. Seven years later, she owns three champion dogs and has bred a number of litters. I think it is important to note that she had owned the breed of her choice since childhood, but only recently as an established professional in her career did she decide to try showing. Once she got that first ribbon, the progression to breeding was easy because she already had a life-long passion for her breed. Other breeders thanked me for mentoring her (actually, the breeder she bought her first show dog from did most of the heavy lifting, not the least of which was selling her a lovely show quality bitch).

"Our breed needs new, young breeders," they would say. Yes, we do! No breed is excluded from this need. Experienced breeders realize that educating and nurturing the next generation of breeders is every bit as important as raising the pups themselves.

Our sport has changed dramatically in just the last twenty-plus years. In the words of Lisa Dubé Forman, "Since 1992, the AKC registry has experienced momentous losses in dog registrations and if you are not up-to-date on these losses, the numbers are alarming. AKC's peak year for registrations was 1992 with approximately 1.5 million dogs registered. In 2010, the total annual AKC dog registrations was 563,611. This is a staggering 63% decrease in annual dog registrations..." To put it another way, 2010 saw about one million dogs less registered than just eighteen years earlier in 1992. It's mind boggling!

The leadership of the American Kennel Club last reported registration numbers back in 2010. The second sentence of the 2016 Annual report reads, "The year saw an overall 8 percent increase in registrations", but since we have not received actual numbers for the past five years, that figure really doesn't tell us what we need to know. Hiding information from the breeders and fanciers does not help any of us address the issues at hand. It certainly has not reduced the amount of criticism or negative legislation directed at the purebred fancy. All it has done is deprived us of important information that will help us track our progress. A savvy observer will not be fooled by the reporting of increasing registration income versus actual registration numbers. While getting more dogs registered (in large part through participants in the Breeder of Merit program) is wonderful, that money still comes from the faithful core, not necessarily from new breeders joining the ranks and breeding more puppies. Lest you think that this situation only affects fanciers, let me share a story. Somewhere in the early 2000s, I received a call from a gentleman in search of a pup. His name was Chris. Scary, but I still remember him! After talking with him for some time, I explained that we did not have any litters planned but I would be happy to help him in his search for a puppy from a responsible breeder. Over the next eighteen months, I must have referred him to a half dozen breeders who were expecting litters. Each time, he would call me and explain that the litter didn't work out for him. Most commonly, there were no pet quality males available. We had become rather familiar with each other. He would have been a good, loving home for a dog, but breeders were giving priority to people who would show or trial a dog, and a loving pet home was dropped off the list time after time. The last time we talked, he cut loose with a colorful diatribe that basically involved the concept that "you people" need to breed more dogs so that there are pups for families who want a treasured companion! Make no mistake. Breeders wonder why the tide of public opinion has turned against us. They didn't turn against us. We shut them out. In our desire to protect and enhance our "reputations" within our own little kingdom, we moved the general public to the bottom of our priority list! And in doing so, we created fertile ground for the AR rhetoric because we were refusing to sell dogs to the general public. Not only are registrations falling precipitously, but the implementation and widespread usage of the limited registration option among high-end breeders even more severely limits breeding options. In the days of over 1 million dogs registered a year, a good number of those dogs came from "non-competitive" purebred breeders. Today, it is becoming difficult for the public to find a purebred dog, registered or not. John Q Public's options are a shelter/rescue dog, a designer dog or waiting (perhaps years) for what we consider a quality purebred dog. If the public could buy a dog from a educated, non-show breeder versus a mixed mess, we might be able to stem the tide of anti-breeder sentiment that is so prevalent today. The image of purebred breeders as elitist is not an image. It is real and we are making our own bed. Right now, that reality involves us having to a large degree eliminated "pet" breeders and the vacuum is being filled by random-bred shelter dogs, designer crossbreds and imported street dogs.

There are several basic tenets of old school dog breeding that we have to let go. It is hard when we have been doing the same things for so long to wrap our mind around making changes that go against the core of who we thought we were. But if our purebred dogs are to be saved and move into the future with healthy and sustainable populations, we must change. The first challenge we must overcome is the prejudice we have against non-competitive breeders (or even breeders who exhibit in a venue other than conformation). Back in the day, if a potential puppy buyer expressed a desire to acquire a breeding regarding testing. Reporting infection with B. canis presently has both negative financial and dog-community effects, potentially leading to ostracization of breeders in some circles if they report disease in their own kennel or breed. The severity and increasing prevalence of canine brucellosis must be recognized and testing supported and performed in order to prevent further spread of this silent and serious disease.

Research has been funded by the AKC CHF to develop a quantitative Polymerase Chain Reaction (qPCR) assay to rapidly detect infection with Brucella with more specificity and sensitivity than current testing methods. Early detection of contagious disease in puppies or newly exposed breeding animals could shorten the quarantine period and would add a measure of safety for buyers of puppies or breeding stock. For further information regarding canine brucellosis please visit www.cfsph.iastate.edu/DiseaseInfo/ or www.cdc.gov/

Family of Firsts!

Although 2nd out of 3 Brood Bitches at DCA National, she did beat a standard for this award so we're very, very pleased for her recognition. Thanks again to Andra Peters O'Connell for that 'FIRST!'

Shelby is one of the girls that started it all for OC's dachshunds. She was my 'first' show dog, 'first' field trial dog, etc. She was also, to the best of my knowledge the 'first' GCH and GCH DC mini smooth chocolate dapple. She produced my first bred-by champion and many more champions subsequently; ROM eligible. She's the dam to Elvis, the first of his coat/pattern to earn an AOM at a DCA National, mom to the first Chocolate I bred who also received my first BIG award at a DCA host show by going RWB. She is mom to the second chocolate dapple to earn the GCH title, Cilly (Priscilla), GCH OC's Hard Headed Woman MSD. Shelby is also working towards her RATN title and at 11 years old will try and get a TD herself. Love my Shelby Lynne.

Thanks to Janelle McCord (Cilly's mom and co-owner) for doing all she's done and helping with this photo. It was a little wild and a miracle since they were all ready to leap off the table after the squeaky toy! Good job to Teddy Lei for having a quick trigger finger! Prey drive is something this family of dachshunds surely isn't lacking!

This boy is on fire! He made history in May of 2017 First miniature smooth chocolate dapple to win an AOM at the DCA National. Thanks to Andra Peters O'Connell for this prestigious, historical and epic win.

Elvis finished very quickly as a young dog in limited showing. His first show garnered him a Hound G1 at a 4-6 puppy event, his next show he was awarded a 5 pt specialty major at 8 months and his second major came at 11 months to finish his CH title. Elvis sat on the shelf for over a year and the first time out as a special he went BOB for his first GCH point. Again in limited exposure he's got 2 GCH majors and is on his way to his GCH title with many other titles to follow. I couldn't be more proud of this boy and what he's accomplished. Thanks to all the judges who awarded him so far in his career. I look forward to showing him as a special in the upcoming year or so.

pair, emails flew alerting fellow breeders about inquiries from people who wanted to breed dogs. Oh, the horror! Instead of being so overly protective of our “lines”, we need to mentor people who already have an interest and teach them to breed dogs responsibly. The definition of a responsible breeder has been discussed for eons, but let me propose a simple answer. A responsible breeder does two things; they breed dogs of good temperament and health, and they take back the dogs they bred without question for the lifetime of the dog. It is not about winning dog shows, agility trials or acquiring titles of any sort. It is not about coat color or texture, tail sets or ears. It is about breeding healthy, happy dogs and being sure that they always have a loving home regardless of the vagaries that life throws at the human side of the equation.

Another thing we must learn is to overcome the impulse to “test and exclude”. In a bygone era, we, the community of AKC purebred dog breeders, had a million or so more dogs to choose from. So if a dog has a borderline hip x-ray or a punctate juvenile cataract, we just moved on to the next candidate. We don’t have that luxury anymore. Otherwise quality dogs with minor defects or dogs that are tested as carriers of various conditions need to be bred! We are reaching the point of no return as both our actual numbers of dogs are plummeting and inbreeding in closed stud books is creating unsustainable populations of dogs due to lack of genetic diversity. A relative of “test and exclude” is “research and exclude”. When breeders are forthright, we will know about a close relative, or maybe even multiple relatives of a dog that are affected by any given condition. It is shortsighted to exclude the relatives of these dogs from breeding programs. Instead, as a community of breeders we need to endeavor to use these dogs wisely, so that their attributes can be shared with future generations and their potential weaknesses minimized. If you think about it, this is equivalent to breeding for health, the same way we have bred for specific physical traits all these many years. Selecting breeding pairs that cross fault for health conditions is reasonable and appropriate. With the aid of some of the newer genetic tests, it may soon become much less difficult and time consuming than it used to be. We need more quality animals for us and the non-competitive homes. Think about our current situation. Breeds with of thousands of dogs have an effective population size of far less than the 100 animal effective population size considered to be sustainable by those working in wildlife conservation. In our fervor to “protect” our bloodlines, we have not only dramatically reduced the number of dogs being produced, but we have spayed and neutered all but one or two dogs from each litter, effectively creating a tidal wave of miniature genetic bottlenecks with each litter. Is it really such a disaster to have more than the “chosen two” from each litter bred? If John Q Public has a choice between a non-show quality purebred or an domestic cross-bred or imported street dog, not only is it to the advantage of a thoughtful buyer to acquire a purebred dog, it is to OUR advantage for them to do so. The truth is no responsible breeder has killed any shelter dogs, but we have most certainly removed the choice of a purebred dog from many families. It is unclear who is suffering the worst from this situation, the American family or the purebred fanciers, but it is clear that no one can fix this but us! The first step in the right direction is to breed more purebred puppies. In the last forty years, we have become skilled in the creation and continuation of philosophies designed to limit breeding of purebred dogs. The test in front of us is the development of a new paradigm that embraces inclusion. A responsibly-bred, AKC registered dog brings joy to people’s lives. We need more joy!
