Message

from the President

Laura A Licht

As I am writing this message we are bracing for a large ice storm stretching from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada. This winter has been challenging for a lot of us, so hopefully when you receive this issue it will be warmer and showing signs of spring. Dog shows are heating up as well and I hope to see you out there showing your beautiful Miniature Dachshunds. Don't forget to advertise those fantastic wins in the Digest!

Our National Specialty plans are coming along nicely. Thanks to all who participated with judge suggestions. Please watch for more show information, club news, and deadlines on our Facebook page, website, Digest, and email blasts. We have made these resources easy to access, so please take advantage of them.

I won't lie to you.. our membership numbers seem to take a hit every year. I'm sure the pandemic and inflation has played a part, but if you are unhappy with something that may prevent you or someone you know from renewing please contact us and we will address it and do our best to rectify it. Our contact information is in every Digest and on the website. If you feel individuals new to our Miniature community would be an asset to NMDC, encourage them to apply! Include applications in your puppy packets! You can easily download and print applications from our website www.nmcdachshund.org. If you have suggestions to help encourage membership we will be happy to hear them! Stay safe, respect one another, and give your Miniature Dachshunds lots of hugs!

7 Easy Ways to Keep Your Senior Dog Happy

By Stephanie Gibeault, MSc, CPDT
Jan 20, 2022

PROVIDE APPROPRIATE EXERCISE

If you were to give older dogs a choice, they would likely skip jogging marathons and mountain hikes. But increasing age doesn't have to mean decreasing activity. Senior dogs still want to play games, get exercise, and go out to sniff the world every day. Even if they need a little encouragement, it's important to keep up their strength and muscle tone. Stiff joints need all the support they can get.

The trick is moderation. Your senior dog would like you to keep them limber, prevent weight gain, encourage their appetite, and maintain fitness all while being aware of their limitations. Find the right activity for your senior dog. Consider slower strolls, low impact activities like swimming, age-appropriate canine calisthenics like platform work, or gentle games of fetch or hide-and-seek.

KEEP YOUR DOG'S MIND SHARP

Senior dogs can suffer from age-related cognitive decline, including cognitive dysfunction syndrome, which is all the more reason to provide lots of enrichment opportunities. In fact, mental stimulation is a surefire way to prevent boredom, encourage engagement with you and the environment, and keep your dog happy.

Thankfully, many types of physical exercise provide mental exercise as well. For example, most senior dogs love sniff walks where you let them explore at their own pace and track every scent. They also love puzzle toys that challenge them to solve a problem to obtain a toy or treat. And what dog isn't yearning for a snuffle mat? Trick training is fun enrichment too.

MAKE YOUR HOME ACCESSIBLE

Senior dogs want you to know it can be hard for them to navigate their environment. Mobility issues like arthritis, stiff joints, or other painful conditions mean the things they once did with ease, like jumping into the back of the car, are challenging now. Stairways and slippery surfaces, like hardwood floors, can be particularly tricky. The struggle can even erode your dog's confidence.

Your older dog would truly appreciate it if you made your home more accessible for them. What about adding carpets for better grip? Or providing traction with a yoga mat or anti-slip rug pad on slippery floors or in front of food and water dishes. Pet stairs will help your dog get on and off furniture safely, and a ramp is wonderful for getting in and out of the car.

PROVIDE THE RIGHT DOG BED

Unlike in their younger days, older dogs can't get comfy curled up on the floor. Hard surfaces are unforgiving, and the couch might be too far of a jump. Your senior dog would love it if you provided thick, high-quality dog beds around the house. Then they can snooze in comfort and get some restorative sleep while staying nearby.

If your dog has joint issues like arthritis, consider an orthopedic bed or one made of memory foam for joint support. Or what about a heated bed or a heating pad on top of the bed? They're great for soothing stiffness and aches. Dogs who feel the cold love them too.

WATCH OUT FOR WEATHER EXTREMES

Speaking of feeling the cold, senior dogs can't tolerate the same temperatures as younger dogs. They want you to know their bodies are more sensitive to hot and cold conditions, so they would love it if you would help them stay comfortable. That could mean a coat or sweater in the winter, even inside the house. And for the summer, consider air conditioning or a fan indoors, and provide constant access to shade and cool, fresh drinking water outdoors. No matter the season, watch how long you spend outside with your dog on days with extreme weather.

ADJUST YOUR DOG'S DIET

Senior dogs have different nutritional requirements than other life stages. For example, older dogs are less active so need fewer calories. Overfeeding leads to obesity which burdens aging joints and can lead to other health concerns. Your senior pet might benefit from easier-to-digest ingredients as well. Or consider switching to wet food. The higher water content is good for the kidneys and its softer texture is easier on aging teeth. Medical conditions can also impact diet choice and the use of supplements like fish oil for joint inflammation. Talk to your veterinarian about the best nutrition options for your dog.

PROVIDE EXTRA GROOMING SESSIONS

Senior dogs want you to know they would appreciate a bit of extra grooming. As they stiffen with age, it can be hard for them to reach every area of their body, so help prevent matting with regular brushing and hair cuts. Don't forget about increasing the frequency of nail trims too. As your senior dog is likely less active, their nails won't naturally wear down the same.

Grooming sessions are also the perfect time to examine your dog for any health changes like lumps or bumps which become more common with age. These could simply be fat deposits, but they may also be cancer, so it's important to catch them as soon as possible. And finally, grooming is wonderful bonding time. Keep grooming positive and pleasant and your senior dog will soak up the pampering. After all, every dog adores love and attention, especially seniors.

The First Official Olympic Mascot Was a Beloved Breed

National Purebred Dog Day®

In 1972, Munich's Summer Games saw the first ever inclusion of an official Olympic mascot in the form of "Waldi," a Dachshund selected for attributes described as required for Olympic athletes: Resistance, tenacity and agility.

"Waldi" was based on Cherie von Birkenhof, a real long-haired Dachshund that Munich Games Organizing Committee President, Willi Daume, had given to Félix Lévitán, the International Sports Press Association President in 1970. "Cherie," was the model for Waldi's creator, German designer, Otl Aicher (who also participated in the logo design for German airline, Lufthansa).

According to the book, The Olympic Marathon, the 1972 Olympic marathon route corresponded to the shape of the dog-mascot. The head of the dog faced west, with athletes running counter-clockwise starting at the back of the dog's neck and continuing around the ears. "Waldi's" mouth was represented by the path going through Nymphenburg Park, its front feet were represented by the run through the Hirschgarten. The belly was the main downtown street in Munich, and its rear feet, rear end and tail were all in the English Garden. The athletes continued along the "back" of the dog and entered the Olympic Stadium.

The concept of "Waldi" was born at a Munich Games Organizing Committee Christmas party where those attending were given crayons, sheets of paper and modeling clay with which to produce their mascot designs.
